Dear friends

Today's readings are full of trouble. Trouble seems to be part of our human condition. The idea that life on earth is full of danger and trouble is taken for granted by we Catholics too. Even in our cornerstone prayer, the Our Father, we end our prayer to our Heavenly Father with the plea to protect us from temptations and to deliver us from evil.

From an early age we have been taught that God doesn't give us more than we can handle, but is that really the case? As I've studied and prayed and contemplated, I've come to the conclusion that this is not the case. We need to go to the beginning of the Our Father – your will be done. We need to stop expecting God's will to reflect OUR will.

The only thing that God wants is our happiness, but on God's terms. Like the widows in both of the readings today, maybe our daily prayer should be: Please take these anxious thoughts away from me Lord. Thy will be done, not mine

Fr Moses Kim
