History of the Poppy

Worn on ANZAC Day (25th April) & Remembrance Day (11 November) each year, the red poppies were among the first to flower in the devastated battlefields of northern France and Belgium in the First World War. In soldiers' folklore, the vivid red of the poppy came from the blood of their comrades soaking the ground. In England in 1919, the British Legion sought an emblem that would honour the dead and help the living. The Red Poppy was adopted as that emblem and since then has been accepted as the Emblem of Remembrance. In 1921 Earl Haig noticed some French widows - inspired by Lt Col John McCrae's iconic poem "In Flanders Fields" - selling silk poppies to raise funds for disabled ex-Servicemen. Haig recognised the potential of these poppies to become both a symbol of Remembrance and also as a means to support the welfare of ex-Servicemen, so he ordered nine million poppies which were sold on 11th November 1921. Today, cloth poppies are sold on, or around, 11 November each year. They are an exact replica in size and colour of the poppies that bloom in Flanders' Fields. The RSL sells millions of red cloth poppies with proceeds going towards raising funds for welfare work.
